“Application of Chromatography in Pharmaceutical Analysis”

Aims and Scope

SOJ Chromatographic Science \(SOJCS\) is an international, open access, scientific journal that publishes articles on Chromatography. SOJCS aims to provide a unique platform for publishing high quality research work through its peer-reviewed process. The journal accepts original research articles, review articles, and short communications on conventional and advanced chromatographic methods.

Chromatography plays a major role in analysis of pharmaceuticals in a variety of situations that range from assay of drug substance to complex determination of trace level of drug in biological fluids.

The objective of the special issue is to focus on current updates in the application of chromatography in pharmaceutical analysis. This special issue deals with the topics like chromatographic method development and validation, hyphenated chromatographic techniques, quality by design approach in chromatography, chromatography based biopharmaceutical analysis, regulatory requirement.
