“Micronutrient Metabolism & Deficiency Consequences”

Aims and Scope

Journal of Nutritional Health & Food Science is a peer reviewed open access journal, exclusively designed for the international Scientific community that addresses ongoing research on Nutritional Health & Food Science, which aims to provide a unique platform for publishing high quality research work. The journal aims to frame up an outstanding special issue on Micronutrient Metabolism & Deficiency Consequences.

Micronutrients are nutrients required by humans and other organisms all over life in small quantities to coordinate a range of physiological functions. The micro minerals are required as nutrients in minute amounts by an organism hence know as trace minerals. Micronutrient deficiency is a lack of the micronutrients required to be fit. Micronutrient Deficiencies arises due to lack of vital vitamins or minerals. These deficiencies are caused by a long-term lack of nutritious food or they can be caused by infections such as worms.

The objective of the special issue is to integrate the growing international community of researchers working on the topics like Dietary Deficiency, Vitamin Deficiencies, Mineral Deficiencies, Green Revolution and Nitrogen Assimilation.
